

Elizabeth "Beth" Gill
Vice President of Academic Affairs/Dean of the Faculty
Austin College

Beth Gill received her bachelor's degree in sociology from Trinity University, M.A. in medical sociology from Yale University, and holds a Ph.D. in organizational/historical comparative sociology from the University of Texas at Austin. In 2013, she was an American Council on Education (ACE) Fellow at DePaul University, where she participated in institutional projects involving enrollment management strategies, programs and initiatives; online learning policies and approaches; institutional development and fundraising; diversity recruitment and retention; and alternative business models for higher education.

Prior to joining Austin College in July of 2018, she served as Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences at Canisius College in Buffalo, New York after serving as acting dean of Academic Affairs at Randolph-Macon College in Ashland Virginia. She enjoyed a 20-year tenure at Randolph Macon, where she held the Charles J. Potts Chair of the Social Sciences.

Gill has authored/co-authored numerous articles, edited book chapters, and made national and international presentations on death and dying, the family, human rights, mindfulness and social justice, pragmatism, and military suicide, all of which examine the effects of the organizational context upon an individual life-worlds.