

John C. Cavanaugh
Senior Consultant
Pathseekers II, Inc.

For over 40 years, Dr. John C. Cavanaugh has been a nationally and internationally recognized leader in higher education policy, innovation and technology, quality assurance, and accreditation, as well as in adult development and aging. John's higher education career reflects his executive leadership (President of the University of West Florida, Chancellor of the Pennsylvania State System of Higher Education, and President & CEO of the Consortium of Universities of the Washington Metropolitan Area) and disciplinary expertise in cognitive aging. He has served on numerous national and international boards and advisory groups, authored/co-authored/edited over 20 books and published nearly 100 articles and chapters on higher education policy, technology, and gerontology. His awards include a Doctor of Humane Letters Honoris Causa for Leadership in Public Higher Education from Drexel University, the AAUA Eileen Tosney Award for Career Service in Higher Education, and the ACE Council of Fellows Mentor of the Year. John received his BA in psychology with high honors from the University of Delaware, and his MA and PhD from the University of Notre Dame.